

MINES SCHOOL HAS MILL NOW

Will Make Test Runs and Assays for Miners and Prospectors been erected at the Texas School of Mines and will be in operation on Friday when the school will be open to the general public incident to the graduation celebration.

The mill is to be used primarily to give the students actual work in crushing and testing ores, but will also be used for the benefit of prospectors and mine owners of the south-west generally.

Any prospector or mine owner who will ship ores in quantities of one ton, may have a test run made free of charge. Not only will he be given an assay of the material, but he will also be informed of the best process for treatment.

On many small mines in the southwest thousands of dollars have been spent for mill treatment, only to find the ore not treated. By having tests made at the Texas School of Mines

A mine into the side of Mount Franklin, where the students are taught the practical work of mining, such as timbering, tunneling, cross cutting, etc., is another feature of the school, made possible by its location so near the mountain. This was one of the features which resulted in the selection of the present site for the school.
